

Effective Writing Teacher

Writing is one of the means of communication aside from speaking. Writing is more advantageous than speaking because through writing we are able to proofread or review our work. Since writing has this advantage, it is expected that the writer commits minimal mistakes or errors in terms of grammar, spelling, and other rules in paragraph writing.

To become effective writing teacher therefore, I need to abide all these rules. I need to: review grammar, be consistent with the tenses, and most especially check the spelling of the words. I know that in teaching Writing takes a lot more time than that of speaking or conversation. But I do believe that through constant practice and open-communication with the errors committed, students can write effectively in English even if they came from a non-English community.
